HAVE YOU BEEN A VICTIM OF CRIME?

We know that this can be a terrible experience, with long lasting consequences for you and your family, leaving you with unanswered questions.

Restorative processes have been shown to deliver strong benefits for those that have suffered harm because of the actions of others.

Victims of crime can ask:
Why me?
Will you come back?
Will you do it again?
They can tell:
How they felt
How they feel now
What happened to them as a consequence of the crime
They can say:
What they think the offender can do to make amends
They can see:
The offender; what he/she is really like

Restorative processes are voluntary for all participants.
You never have to and should not feel pressured into participating in a restorative process, should you not want to or not feel ready.

If you want to talk to someone about how a crime has affected you, or to get more information about whether a restorative process can help you, please contact Medway Mediation on:
